Alexander—It was correctly shown that the gold fields were almost completely isolated from the capital—so infested were the great highways with banditti, that every man felt under no compulsion from the City of Melbourne to hazard his life. Arrived at the diggings, and becoming rich by hard labour or good fortune, he was a marked man. If he retained his wealth in the city, he would have been murdered; if he did he commit it to the care of the Government Escort or the more enterprising Private Company, he was told that they could not insure his safe delivery in Melbourne. In this, the richest colony in the British empire, the Government could not, or would not, insure the delivery to the gold miner of his wealth of which they had become a trustee, in return for having secured him the right to work the mine—whereby they could not guarantee the safety of the miner's gold, placed in their hands for transit.

The Camp itself is a little township beautifully situated, where the host of officials, upwards of 300 in number, administer the Government; they seem to have gathered within their circle all the wealth. Justice is not only done, but the great majority of the miners desire things that really belong to the public, the Post Office, that great social highway, the repository of the hopes and fears of 30,000 persons, thus removed from the great centres of commerce, and within the Camp itself—the clergy, the corner, in fact, they omitted nothing useful, all were gathered within the sacred circle of the Camp. Isolating themselves completely from the great world, they were able to govern as they saw fit to protect and govern—carrying out the law, if they dispensed it all, harshly and rudely, making an offensive law doubly offensive by the mode in which it was administered. They carried out a terrific hatred to an extent scarcely to be credited.

It could not be expected that the Government in such exciting times, could get shillings per diem and their rations, while the gold fields lay within their reach; but would it not be better served by a more honest policy—to send one third, and by these means obtaining men who were more calculated to gain public confidence? Distributed throughout the mining districts of the colony are upwards of 600,000 acres of land, most of them owned by those who have taken French leave of the land of their expatriation—this is exclusive of ticket-of-leave men and ex-prisoners. Many, to speak within bounds, of the police force of Victoria are little else but the sons of military officers, that the Government knew this to be the fact, but it is certain that they never took the necessary precautions to ascertain the character of the men whom they appointed.

Among the hundreds of men called the people, hope for from such a quarter?

Among the tens of thousands engaged in mining pursuits are men of all grades; there are however large numbers of men of education, some of them not disinclined to gain their living by the pick and shovel, in the gold mines. Oxford and Cambridge men, some who were, and others who were not "plucked for the little go," are to be seen among the pedants from the schools of the modern Athens, both medical and clerical, the younger sons of some of the fine old English families, who are content to compete with the men of letters and science, and even the members of the classes. It is upon persons of this stamp that bad government tells. The ignorant man, strong as Hercules, does nothing but grumble, but the educated man wields the pen, and the pen is mightier than the sword, and it is in motion. What can be more galling than to be assailed by a man, after the style of a Victoria policeman, musket in hand, whose browgave scorned strongly of Tipperary, and the words of the Governor of Van Diemen's Land, "shew your license." Or what can be more painful than to see men of education and respectability, equal to the Commissioners of Public Works, and the Commissioner's tents within the camp for hours, waiting to pay their license fee, and sometimes compelled to go for successive days several miles for this purpose, because the Government will not accept of money sent by post.

So generally disliked is the Government at the mines that, with the exception of spies and informers, I do not think it could raise a single friend without the lines of the Camp. Every one who has been to the mines, and who has made the broad assertion that every one of these men is a bad fellow, that the charges against them are untrue, and that the mode in which the Government seeks to convict these men is odious. I give you one instance as an example. A man wet, apparently from rain, came to the camp, and the convict, stated that he had fallen into the water, and begged hard for some grog. The stockkeeper, on being much pressed, sold him some. This man was a Government informer—an informant of the Government—and he was fined! I do not wish to get a case up against the Government and its subordinate. In these exciting times we see how much easier it is to destroy a bad Government than to create a good one. We need not wonder, therefore, who conduct the affairs of our country at the central head of this continent should know how British subjects are treated. In the midst of the Camp stands a large tree, the shade of which is sought by missionaries to chain the delinquents who were taken at the mines, while working without a license! Again, among the sprigs (mere boys) of the aristocracy, and the nobility, in the horse police force, it is usual to handle the poor sones together, the one sober and the other drunk. The officer thinks it "capital fun" to see the drunken man falling down and pulling the coat of the companion who is sober.

Passing from these charges against the Government of Victoria and its officers, and these are few examples only, where a hundred could be cited, the great cause of discontent has arisen from the want of food, and the famine prices during the severe winter which has just terminated. Flour was up to £15 per bag, tea, 3s. 6d. per lb.; sugar, 1s. 9d.; salt, 2s. per seabby and diseased sheep, and all sorts of provisions at enormous prices, something like four hundred per cent on Sydney prices. I was almost forgetting that potatoes were £15 10s. per bag, or 2s. 6d. per cwt., and the price of the same sweeping charge, that the Government had no idea of the state of things; that while receiving from Mount Alexander £40,000 per month for license fees alone, the highways to the gold areas were impeded by dead cattle plots were hatched in towns, while the nucleus of hordes of thieves, for the purpose of robbing the successful digger on his way to Melbourne, and all this under the eyes of the Government!

What wonder, then, that dissatisfaction grew throughout these gold mines, which will take years to remove; and what is worse, the people are separated the mis-rule of the Local Government, and the mismanagement of the Authorities—hence the great born recently granted by the Imperial Power is not appreciated. I am sorry that I am compelled thus to write, but I feel that I have said too much. I had almost here prepared to see the infant Government of Victoria combating with its difficulties with at least a plain share of the energy of our race; but a cursory review of its proceedings shows me very plainly that it is the fault of the infant, with but little promise of becoming a vigorous child.

ANNOUNCED PUBLIC MEETING AT MOUNT ALEXANDER

It will be in the recollection of your readers, who take an interest in the political and social affairs of Mount Alexander, that the great gathering on the 22nd of October was the first of a series of meetings held monthly, in order to give the delegates appointed at each meeting time to proceed to Melbourne to lay before His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor a full-length statement of their grievances. On Tuesday, the 28th inst., the delegates returned in time for the 15th, and consequently the meeting stood adjourned to this day, Tuesday, the 24th. Captain Harrison, the chairman of the meeting of the 15th ult., presided, and Mr. Henry is the secretary, and a German gentleman, who is known, it would be difficult to spell, and more difficult to pronounce, were the parties appointed for the important mission, but the epidemic which the influenza, had seized on the patriots' triumvirate, and laid them prostrate. They, however, despatched a lengthy account of their interview with the Lieutenant-Governor to the petitions laid before him by the Committee at the Mount; and the meeting of this day was for the purpose of making the public acquainted with these matters. The rainings of persons met who were almost as hurricane, and the rain, when the wind ceased, came down heavily. The attendance was therefore but small compared with the gatherings at the meetings of the previous week. A number of persons met who were deputed by their parties to represent them. Mr. Bryce Ross, the agent for the Melbourne Morning Herald, held the Government documents as sent to the delegates, and after some few introductory remarks, read the documents, which were very lengthy, to the persons assembled.

The replies of His Excellency, through the Colonial Secretary, were somewhat lengthy, and were couched in a most conciliatory tone. There were two subjects on which the Lieutenant-Governor dilated; they were the most prominent among the regulations, in order to avoid the necessity of the diggers taking the law into their own hands, and the setting apart "district runs" for the mining purposes. He alluded to the arrangements for the departing of sheep brought for sale to the mines by distant parties. The memorials to His Excellency as to the first of these matters made a strong case against the Government, and he admitted that it indeed exhibited an array of facts not to be disputed or denied, and the Lieutenant-Governor, in his replies to the delegates, seems half to acknowledge the evils, by regretting that circumstances which surrounded him, and over which he had no control. He however stated, that the Government were organising a better and more extensive system of districts, and that the diggers, on the other hand, were organising themselves, and that if upon enquiry, "district runs" were necessary, he would unhesitatingly concede them.

The reading of the documents having concluded, a long and desultory conversation followed, and some of the assembled diggers did not hesitate to denounce them in full of sympathy. It was pointed out that nothing had to do the digger, while the Legislative Council passed the Export Duty Bill on gold.

Mr. WALLACE was then called to the chair: He said, although the weather was continually changing from one cause, the inclemency of the weather and the want of publicity by proper placards. He alluded to the resolutions determined on at former meetings, and said that the Government could not have the diggers would pay no license fees if the Export Duty Bill passed, and unless they had really better police protection. It was of no use one man, or ten men, resisting of themselves, and he thought that resistance it must be done by the thousand; they must have better roads and better government in every respect. The Executive were foolish to goad the people to resistance. If they resisted, what could they do? What could the Government do with them? Where could they imprison them? How feed them? Let them remember America. Could the red coats who were fast deserting fight against the diggers? He said that the Government and the question was "to be or not to be"—to be slaves or freemen, if they now submitted to this iniquitous Gold Export Bill, was one of a series of oppressive measures directed against the diggers. The Government would have the 30s. license money, and the 2s. 6d. per ounce export duty. Would they pay it. (No, no.) The poor man, crushed, and driven from his home, would have no opportunity of freeing himself; but the upper classes of this country, as in England, were arraying themselves against him. At a former meeting it had been asked, who was to bear the expense of the war? Who was to carry the cat that destroyed the mice; or in other words, who would be the first to resist. Must not fall on one man or two men, but they would recommend them to go in a body to the Governor, and say to him, "We are your Majesty's," and where would they place them, he would again ask? The speaker then at some length denounced the Government of Victoria as the most wicked and most profligate Government in the world, and he ended, and was listened to with great attention,—the audience cheering loudly.

The resolution was then proposed by Mr. SADDINGTON, in a speech full of the choicest of the diggings oratory.

That, in consequence of the determination of the Government to pass the Gold Export Duty Bill, which would deprive the diggers of the means of subsistence, and condemn the whole of the diggers of Victoria to pay no license fees, and to export their gold at a rate of 2s. 6d. per ounce.

The resolution was seconded by Mr. WILLIAM BROWN, and passed with great acclamation.

Mr. LATOCHAN, Wesleyan Local Preacher, then rose to support the resolution.—

That, in the event of the Gold Export Duty Bill being passed by the Legislative Council of Victoria, this meeting recommends all who are in favour of the proceeding to leave the colony immediately, and to return to their native land, and to advise the diggers to do so, in order to give the Commissioner an opportunity of taking them into custody for resisting the license fee.

The speaker opened his remarks with a brief history of the colony. He said that the husband must resist together; he was a man of peace, but would not be crushed; he was for resistance, but it must be a well timed, organised resistance.

Mr. COLLINS, another Wesleyan local preacher, seconded the resolution in a temperate but clever speech. He, and thousands like him, were for resisting the iniquitous tax; but he said that the diggers must be united, and as unjust; they drove the people to rebellion, but the Government would yield. The speaker alluded briefly to the necessity for unanimity, and appealed to the meeting for support. He said that the diggers must be sufficient; would they give this paltry sum? (Yes and more.) They could thus raise thousands of pounds. (Great cheers.) They must be united.

The motion was then put and carried with acclamation.

A fresh committee was then appointed to make the necessary preparations for the combined movement against the license fee, and the meeting adjourned till Monday evening next, afterwards subscribed by the great mass of the persons present, and it was determined that a collector should be appointed to go round the tents and huts of the diggers.

The following day a large public meeting was passed, and the members of the committee met immediately afterwards, in order to devise the best means for carrying out the objects for which they were appointed.

VAN DIEMEN'S LAND.

We are in possession of Hobart Town and Launceston papers to the 27th ult.

The chief, indeed engrossing topic, was connected with the new laws recently passed by the steps proposed to be taken by the colonists of all classes to express their indignation at the Convicts' Prevention Act, which has been lately passed by the Legislature of Victoria. It had been agreed by some of the most influential members of the community to hold a public meeting to carry out the object of the Convention, and to discuss the welfare and political and social improvement of the colony. One of these objects being to facilitate the annihilation of class distinctions in the Community of Van Diemen's Land; to enable the Colonists to take advantage of industrial enterprise, and to realise the advantages of free institutions on equal terms; lastly, to petition Her Majesty to withhold her assent from the Convicts' Prevention Bill of Victoria.

With these views in view, a public meeting was convened for Wednesday, the 17th ultimo, the advertisement being signed by Mr. R. Dry, M.L.C., Mr. Dunn, M.L.C., Mr. T. D. Dry, M.L.C., Mr. Morrison, M.L.C., and a number of other influential gentlemen. It was considered by the requisitionists that but one feeling could exist throughout the colony as to the propriety of the action, and that the object sought to be achieved by the requisitionists.

With respect to the sincerity of these gentlemen in their professed desire to prevent the ratification of the Convicts' Prevention Bill, we have no doubt.

of the chief requisitionists being members of the Australasian League) no pains were spared. The Courier, the organ of the Anti-transportation party, was foremost in its grave and unqualified denouncement of the Victoria law. It observed:—"This general pardon is a very dangerous measure, including additionally pardoned persons, and thereby dies in the face of the Royal prerogative negatives the inherent right of the British subject not being under lawful arrest or restraint, and denies the perpetration of the imperial crime." And thus, it is as dangerous to the Freeman as it is to the possessor of qualified freedom."—"It was also well shown by other writers connected with the League, that the law was a conditional pledge, if arrested at Victoria under the Prevention Act, must immediately be set free upon a writ of habeas corpus being regularly issued out and adequately secured." "The law is manifestly repugnant to the law of England, and the Legislature of Victoria having therefore acted illegally in passing it, and the Lieutenant-Governor being equally culpable, in having assented to it, none strong reprobation of the Victoria Act by those who were concerned in convening the meeting for the 18th would have satisfied every person of their sincerity; but to every gentleman of the plainnessity;" but to every gentleman of the plainnessity;" but to every gentleman of the plainnessity;" but to every gentleman of the plainnessity;"

On the first evening, Mr. Reeves (who, it is admitted by all parties, behaved with every fairness) was called to the chair. In opening the proceedings he had been for some time before the Freeman public, a requisition having been signed by upwards of 1000 residents of Hobart Town, for a petition to the Legislative Council, praying that the Victorian Legislature, known as the Convicts' Prevention Bill; an enactment he might say, framed in a worse spirit than ever was shown by any legislature. In every clause, and in every word, it was a direct insult and a deliberate disrespect to the person and prerogative of our gracious Queen and the Government, and it went to the flat abrogation of the solemn decision of the British Parliament, which declared that the Sovereign, in her greatest privilege, the prerogative of mercy. That the Act would be disallowed by the British Government no one could for a moment doubt; but it was duty bound to prevent the influence of that enactment, to express their abhorrence of the notorious measure, and he would without further remark call upon any gentleman who might wish to address the meeting.

Mr. Gray moved the first resolution. His speech, as reported in most of the papers, consisted more of a tissue of abuse against several members of the League, than of a statement of the objects of the meeting. Having been called to order frequently by the Chairman, he proceeded to move the first resolution:—That it is the deliberate act of the Victorian Legislature in passing the Prevention of Convicts' Bill lately passed by the Legislative Council of Victoria, and which has received the Royal Assent, on behalf of Her Most Gracious Majesty, by the Lieutenant Governor, to treat the Queen, his Majesty's beloved Sovereign, by directly outraging the Royal Prerogative—is derogatory to the British Constitution, by sacrificing its spirit of freedom and equity—is contradictory to the principles of justice, and by treating their express enactments—is disgraceful to a nation's honourable character, by a faithless withdrawal, under the severest penalties of confiscation and bondage, of the rights of property, and by depriving thousands of our fellow-subjects, who are entitled to the same rights and liberties enjoyed such privileges, upon the injudicious to all who arrive as emigrants to these colonies, by subjecting them to unjustifiable persecutions of all sorts, and to unequal treatment in the law, is generally ruinous to all the relations of free commerce and intercommunications hitherto so amicably and advantageously existing between the Australian Colonies, and is a gross wrong and unworthy legislation, and is free colonialism."

Mr. Moore, of the Hobart Town Guardian, seconded the motion.

Mr. C. B. Brewer then came forward; but after all accounts he was the weakest of men, and made exceedingly insulting manner. Grief of "He's a member of the League" prevented him from being heard for a considerable time. At length, by the strong remonstrances of the Chairman, he was allowed to proceed. He said, that in accordance with the requisition which had been published, himself and other members of the League had attended the meeting that evening, not to oppose its main object, but to support it. He asked the meeting approved of the resolution which had been moved by Mr. Gray, and were prepared to sign the petition to the Queen to withhold her assent from an Act which but for a technical objection would have been assented to by the Van Diemen's Land authorities, the Victoria Legislature would never have dared to pass. [Here the uproar was renewed, and Mr. Gray and others declared that this technical objection was a mere pretext.] The Chairman of the League at Victoria, of whom Mr. Brewer and his friends were part and parcel. The Chairman again interrupted, and insisted on Mr. Brewer being heard, and at length that he was heard. He asked the meeting why an endeavour was thus made to perpetuate class distinctions? He and his friends had convened a meeting for the following ends, to wit:—to obtain from the Queen the Queen to grant free pardons to the holders of conditional pardons and tickets-of-leave in Van Diemen's Land, so that all heart-sore and agitating matters should be healed up, and the peace of mind restored to the people of the League, so far from countenancing the unconstitutional proceedings of the Victoria Legislature, was earnest in its desire to prevent the provisions of a most outrageous and unjust law from taking effect.

The motion was then put and carried by acclamation.

Mr. Hand moved and Mr. Davies seconded the following resolution. That the petition presented to the Queen by the League, on behalf of Her most gracious Majesty's disallowance of the Victoria 'Prevention Bill,' be adopted, and after being duly signed, forwarded by your Excellency to the Queen, and that you, Sir, the Governor, Van Diemen's Land, respectfully requesting his Excellency to transmit the same at the earliest convenience to her most gracious Majesty." It is unnecessary to print this petition, as it is self-explanatory, and I pray and pray will sufficiently explain the purpose. Having set forth the particulars connected with the passing of the Convicts Bill by the Victoria Legislature, the petitioners thus proposed:

"That the said Bill interdicts from residing in Victoria, under the severest penalties, all such persons who, though once in bondage, are now conditionally pardoned in virtue of the provisions of the said bill, and threatens to visit even upon free emigrants, many most serious evils, as well on their person, as by perilling their communications and reciprocity of trade with the colonies, and thus rendering these colonies—and subjecting all persons indiscriminately, upon their location in Victoria, to grievances, oppressive, inequitable, and altogether inconsistent with the mild and equitable spirit of the Imperial Law. That the said Legislative Enactment of Victoria is manifestly opposed to a recent Imperial Statute, which enjoin, that no laws shall be enacted in any of His Majesty's Colonies, save no Bills repugnant to the Laws of England; and is also opposed to the and beauty." Mr. Garrard has presented this splendid, Mr. Podder, with a piece of plate to the effect that the brilliant is a diamond. (The chemical section of the scientific museum at Belfast on Tuesday, Professor Tennant made communication on this diamond. He stated that the Koh-i-noor, in the state in which it is now, is a diamond, and is composed of two parts, and in his opinion it formed a part of the great Russian diamond. All diamonds he said, may be readily split at certain angles. The Koh-i-noor, he said, is a diamond, and has formed a portion of the great Russian diamond. There have been no difficulty in dividing it. This was illustrated by the separation of a crystal of fluor-spar. The Koh-i-noor, when exhibited, weighed 186 carats, and by cutting it into the shape of a brilliant it has been reduced to 106 carats.

Mr. Mort calls the attention of intending purchasers to the Proclamation of Tolls submitted to this advertisement, as appears in the Sydney Morning Herald of Wednesday, the 8th instant, by which it will be seen that the rates of tolls are considerably increased, and that it is anticipated the Toll Gates will return double the amount of revenue that they have done at any former period.

THE SHEEP.

Are of a superior description, no expense having been spared in procuring the best rams. The wool of 1851 sold in Sydney for one shilling and three-pence per pound, and the clip of this year's ewes averages 21lbs. The following are the numbers of the sheep, viz.:

- 5460 Ewes

THE RUNS are situate in the Lachlan district, twenty miles distant from Yass, on the road to Port Phillip, having a large number of water, an abundant supply of water in the driest seasons. Leases for fourteen years are about to be granted, the fees for measurement having been paid to the Government.

THE IMPROVEMENTS upon the Bogolong Station comprise—comfortable verandah Cottage of four rooms, with detached kitchen and servants room; store and stable; a large and capacious well; well arranged wool shed, a cultivation paddock and a horse paddock.

At Coppebella there is an overseer's cottage of four rooms, and a cultivation paddock.

High prices for wool, and the proximity of Port Phillip renders them a most desirable investment, and as the terms are exceedingly liberal any one wishing to embark in pastoral pursuits has here an opportunity of doing so, and the present well-arranged premises, the large consumption of wool upon an increased population, to say nothing of any advance in wool, must send properties of this description to double or treble their present value. 6192

PARRAMATTA DISTRICT.

HIGHLY FAVORABLE OFF OF SUPERIOR HORSE STOCK.

M. R. J. F. STAFF has been honoured with instructions from H. B. Beresford, Esq., of Bungarabee, to offer for public competition, on MONDAY, 27th, and TUESDAY, 28th December next, to commence at 11 o'clock, viz.:

The whole of that gentleman's superior Horse Stock, comprising about 70 head, including brood mares, cart horses, saddle horses, gig and harness horses, horses fit for racing, and others, broken to lead.

These horses have been bought out of the late Belford stud, the property of C. Bury, Esq., of Calcutta, by the present proprietor, at a price of £50 per mare, and £60 per mare, great care for their beauty, breed, size, and bone. The Belford stud was under the management of R. B. Dawson, Esq., for upwards of twelve years, and the original stock came from the Glendon stud, besides the importation of the best Arab and English blood. The stud was sold not long since by Mr. Mort, under the authority of Captain Scott, attorney to the late proprietor.

The intention of the present proprietor was to have continued on a small number of the best mares; but in consequence of Mr. Cleve, of Sydney, having purchased the purchases of Bungarabee, and requiring immediate possession, combined with the probability of the departure of the owner for Calcutta, this select property is now offered to the public.

About 60 head of cattle, among which will be found milch cows, heifers, and 30 steers fit for work.

Together with sundry other lots, such as saddle horses, harness breaking in tackle, cart, harness, &c., &c.

And a Patent Machine for corking wine.

Terms at time of sale.
